

The architectural floor plan of the 'Haus der Jugend' in Berlin shows a complex of five buildings (BAUTEIL A to E) and a TURNHALLE. The plan includes various rooms such as classrooms, a library, a kitchen, a gym, and a parking lot. The buildings are arranged around a central courtyard area with greenery and outdoor seating. The TURNHALLE is a large, rectangular building on the right side of the plan. The overall layout is designed to provide a functional and social environment for young people.
